History of Labor Day

Labor Day, celebrates American workers and their past and current contributions to the success of our country. The first Labor Day took place on September 5, 1882 in New York City. The Central Labor Union of New York organized a parade of thousands of union members from all trades that culminated in a picnic for the members and their families. This form of celebration gained popularity across the country – by 1894, over 30 states had recognized Labor Day as a holiday. On June 28, 1894, President Grover Cleveland signed a law officially making the first Monday of September a national holiday.

In its earliest form, Labor Day consisted of street parades and picnics exhibiting the strength and number of local labor unions. Prominent citizens made speeches at these festivities, and the Sunday before Labor Day was often dedicated to the educational and spiritual element of the organized labor movement.

Although Labor Day no longer has the fanfare that it did in past years, it still celebrates the American workforce and offers many citizens a day of rest. Labor and the nature of work continue to be hot topics on the national stage. A number of JMC fellows have written about American workers and the ways in which they have contributed to our nation's identity. In recognition of Labor Day, the Jack Miller Center presents the following collection of resources about the origins of organized labor, the nature of the American work ethic, and the government's role in the average worker's life.

Basketball Youth Hoop Session

On July 29th at the Hammond Sports Plex a Basketball Youth Hoop Session was held in memory of late basketball player Teyon Ornaïl McCoy

On January 13, 2023, Teyon Ornaïl McCoy, a standout basketball player, was recruited for a higher team, Heaven's All-Star League.

Though his talent captured the country's heart, that's not where his story begins.

Teyon was born November 4, 1967. His quiet personality would soothe you, but his infectious smile and humor would win your heart.

He had a knack for ensuring everyone always felt safe and welcome in the crowd, a trait born in his family unit, where he was always protective of his siblings. Despite not being the oldest, he was the one to run to when a situation needed a cool head.

His talent for building team, trust, and camaraderie, learned in his family unit, carried over to his career as an athlete.

Teyon was a standout basketball player at Bishop Noll Institute in Hammond, Indiana, where he started at point guard all four of his years there. During his senior year, he was named to the Indiana All-Star Team in 1986.

His prowess in the classroom and on the court made him one of the most recruited student-athletes in school history.

After graduating from high school, Teyon went on to play for three years at the University of Maryland, where he earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in Business. He finished his college career at the University of Texas.

Panama Canal open to traffic

The American-built waterway across the Isthmus of Panama, connecting the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, is inaugurated with the passage of the U.S. vessel Ancon, a cargo and passenger ship.

The rush of settlers to California and Oregon in the mid 19th century was the initial impetus of the U.S. desire to build an artificial waterway across Central America. In 1855, the United States completed a railroad across the Isthmus of Panama (then part of Colombia), prompting various parties to propose canal-building plans. Ultimately, Colombia awarded rights to build the canal to Ferdinand de Lesseps, the French entrepreneur who had completed the Suez Canal in 1869. Construction on a sea-level canal began in 1881, but inadequate planning, disease among the workers, and financial problems drove Lesseps' company into bankruptcy in 1889. Three years later, Philippe-Jean Bunau-Varilla, a former chief engineer of the canal works and a French citizen, acquired the assets of the defunct French company.

By the turn of the century, sole possession of the isthmian canal became imperative to the United States, which had acquired an overseas empire at the end of the Spanish-American War and sought the ability to move warships and commerce quickly between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. In 1902, the U.S. Congress authorized purchase of the French canal company (pending a treaty with Colombia), and allocated funding for the canal's construction. In 1903, the Hay-Bunau Varilla Treaty was signed with Columbia, granting the U.S. use of the territory in exchange for financial compensation. The U.S. Senate ratified the treaty, but the Colombian Senate, fearing a loss of sovereignty, refused.

In response, President Theodore Roosevelt gave tacit approval to a Panamanian independence movement, which was engineered in large part by Philippe-Jean Bunau-Varilla and his canal company. On November 3, 1903, a faction of Panamanians issued a declaration of independence from Colombia. The U.S.-administered railroad removed its trains from the northern terminus of Colón, thus stranding Colombian troops sent to crush the rebellion. Other Colombian forces were discouraged from marching on Panama by the arrival of U.S. warship Nashville.

On November 6, the United States recognized the Republic of Panama, and on November 18 the Hay-Bunau-Varilla Treaty was signed with Panama, granting the U.S. exclusive and permanent possession of the Panama Canal Zone. In exchange, Panama received $10 million and an annuity of $250,000 beginning nine years later. The treaty was negotiated by U.S. Secretary of State John Hay and Bunau-Varilla, who had been given plenipotentiary powers to negotiate on behalf of Panama. Almost immediately, the treaty was condemned by many Panamanians as an infringement on their country's new national sovereignty.

In 1906, American engineers decided on the construction of a lock canal, and the next three years were spent developing construction facilities and eradicating tropical diseases in the area. In 1909, construction proper began. In one of the largest construction projects of all time, U.S. engineers moved nearly 240 million cubic yards of earth and spent close to $400 million in constructing the 40-mile-long canal (or 51 miles long, if the deepened seabed on both ends of the canal is taken into account). On August 15, 1914, the Panama Canal was opened to traffic.

Rain Didn't Stop Families from Visiting Back-to-School Rally and Catholic Charities

The Back-to-School Rally held at East Chicago Central High School went on as planned last Saturday, August 5 from 12:00 pm to 4:00 pm. The steady rain didn't keep the hundreds of families from participating. Catholic Charities Diocese of Gary was one of more than a dozen booths where students and their parents could receive helpful information and needed school supplies – like the insulated reusable lunch bags that were donated by Notre Dame Federal Credit Union and distributed by Catholic Charities.

“Notre Dame FCU donated 250 of these durable lunch bags for Catholic Charities volunteers to fill with nonperishable lunch foods, snacks and fruit,” said Tina Gunnum, Manager of the Catholic Charities Food Pantry. “By 3:00 pm all the filled lunch bags had been given to the grateful children and teens,” Gunnum said. “Thank you to Notre Dame Federal Credit Union!” Gunnum concluded.

In addition to the lunch bags filled with food, students were asked to sign a poster-sized card expressing their gratitude to Notre Dame FCU for the donated lunch bags. Families were also encouraged to gather other information about Catholic Charities' many other valuable services.

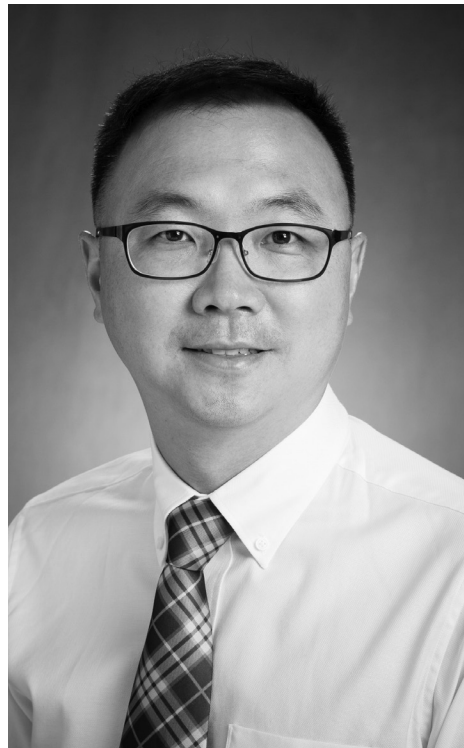

Besides the Food Pantry, Catholic Charities Diocese of Gary provides Homelessness Prevention services, Affordable Housing assistance, Pathway to U.S. Citizenship, Women's Care Center, Parenting Education, Financial Workshops and much more. The nonprofit organization provides its services at no cost and without discrimination to residents of Lake, Porter, La Porte and Starke Counties.
