HAMMOND BOARD HEARS GAS STATION REQUESTS TO STAY OPEN OVERNIGHT

The City of Hammond Board of Public Works & Safety has now heard eight requests for an exception to the city's recently enacted ordinance that closes all gas stations in the city from midnight – 5 a.m. The ordinance, which passed the City Council and was signed by Mayor Thomas M. McDermott, Jr., into law in late August, allows for affected gas stations to petition for an exception.

Since its enactment fourteen stations have petitioned for an exception and eight have been heard. The ordinance takes effect on November 1st and the city is attempting to hear all requests before that date. "I know the Board of Public Works has been busy hearing these matters and they've set special meeting date to accommodate the requests," said Mayor McDermott.

The hearings look into the amount of police calls to the station focusing on the last twenty-four months as well as examining the cameras and security at the stations. Other factors include lighting, zoning and code violations, business licensing, the proximity of the stations to the interstate to serve travelers, and any other safety concerns. "On the city's behalf we are trying to paint a full picture to the board of each station to see where the problems are and where they aren't. It gives the board the ability to hear from the owners and the city," said Kevin Smith, Corporation Counsel for the city.

The police department over the last year has implemented the FUSUS system for businesses that choose to participate. This system allows police officers to view the cameras at a station in real time when a crime or issue is reported from the business location. "This is a tool that is becoming extremely useful to our department to help prevent and solve criminal activity throughout the city. Even our patrol vehicles can access these cameras on the way to a call," said Hammond Police Chief William Short.

A by-product of the gas station exception hearings has been increased focus on security and safety at the station. "Before we passed this ordinance and had the exception hearings, many of these stations weren't on FUSUS, didn't have sufficient camera systems, and had zoning and ordinance violations that weren't being corrected. This process is bringing them into compliance and in the process making both the city and the gas stations safer," said Mayor McDermott.

So far, three locations have been granted exceptions, 3350 Calumet, 7305 Kennedy, and 7452 Indianapolis Boulevard. Several others are awaiting rulings from the Board, while one location, 403 Gostlin withdrew its request for an exception due to a prior agreement with the city to be closed overnight. "The system we've established is working. I want to thank those councilmembers that voted in favor of this ordinance to make our city safer and to support the police department," said the mayor. The ordinance passed 7-2.

The Towle Theater is pleased to announce auditions for their upcoming musical The Story of My Life by Neil Bartram and Brian Hill. The show will be directed by Jeff Casey with assistant direction from Nikki Dizon and musical direction by Elizabeth Tuazon.

Auditions are on Saturday, November 18th in Chicago at Chopin Theatre from 11:00am to 3:00pm. Audition appointments are required. Callbacks and local auditions are at the Towle Theater-5205 Hohman Avenue, Hammond, IN on Sunday, November 19th at 2:00pm. No appointments required for local auditions. They are looking for 2 strong male singers and actors, 35-55 years old. All ethnicities and types strongly encouraged to audition. Visit www.towletheater.org for character descriptions. All roles in the shows will be paid.

Please prepared a 32-bar cut of a contemporary Broadway song in the style of the show but not a song from the show. Have a contrasting piece ready if asked. Please provide sheet music in the correct key for the provided accompanist. You may be asked to sing from the score and/or read from the script.

The Story of My Life follows the friendship of Alvin and Thomas, two men from a small town. These lifelong friends are reunited after Alvin's mysterious death. In the abstract world of his mind, Thomas struggles to write Alvin's eulogy while recounting the many turns that their lives have taken since meeting as children. Alvin searches through the manuscripts and stories in Thomas' mind to lead him on a journey of remembrance. Through music and song, these two friends recount their adventures, explore their past dissonance, and ultimately discover what is at the base of every strong friendship... love.

A few rehearsals will occur in December, and full rehearsals will begin in January. Performances are February 23-25, March 1-3, and 8-10, 2024.

Due to major renovations happening in Downtown Hammond, navigating to the Towle Theater parking lot may be difficult. Hammond Port Authority Rename Hammond Marina in Honor of Former Mayor Thomas McDermott, Sr.

thrive over the past 30 years,” said Milan Kruszynski, Director of the Hammond Port Authority.

The marina came at significant political and personal cost to the former mayor who had to convince a very skeptical city council that investing $23 Million in the late 1980’s to construct the marina was money well spent. When the marina opened in 1991 its success was anything but guaranteed—1000 new slips and bringing in an old Great Lakes passenger ship, the Milwaukee Clipper, for entertainment was the initial push by the city. Mayor

McDermott Sr.’s bet paid off, however, when the State of Indiana awarded the City of Hammond a casino license in 1996 due in part to the fact that the infrastructure was already in place. Since then Hammond has enjoyed being one of the most successful casino cities in the Midwest.

“Whenever I’m at the marina I always think about what my dad did up here,” said Hammond’s current mayor Thomas M. McDermott, Jr. “All the economic development dollars we have enjoyed as a city, in the hundreds of millions of dollars, wouldn’t have happened if we didn’t have the casino and marina. We’ve got my dad to thank for that and I think renaming the marina is a fitting tribute.”

The marina will now be known as the “Thomas M. McDermott, Sr. Hammond Marina.” A rededication ceremony was held on Friday, October 13, 2023 at the Hammond Marina 701 Casino Center Drive, Hammond.

An assassination attempt threatens President Harry S. Truman

On November 1, 1950, Griselio Torresola and Oscar Collazo attempt to assassinate President Harry S. Truman at the Blair House in Washington, D.C. Truman escaped unscathed.

In the autumn of 1950, the White House was being renovated and President Truman and his family were living in the nearby Blair House on Pennsylvania Avenue. On the afternoon of November 1, Truman and his wife were upstairs when they heard a commotion—and gunshots—coming from the front steps of the house. Indeed, the pair of would-be assassins had strolled up to the front door of Blair House and opened fire. They never made it past the entry steps, however, due to the quick reaction of police officers and guards. Secret Service Agent Leslie Coffelt was mortally wounded in the ensuing melee, but not before he managed to kill Torresola. Collazo later revealed to police just how poorly planned the assassination attempt was: the assailants were unsure if Truman would even be in the house when they launched their attack at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Torresola and Collazo were political activists and members of the extremist Puerto Rican Nationalist Party, a group fighting for full independence from the United States. The “Independistas,” as they were commonly called, targeted Truman despite his support of greater Puerto Rican autonomy.

Apparently unfazed by the attempt on his life, Truman kept his scheduled appointments for the day. “A President has to expect these things,” he remarked dryly. Oscar Collazo was sentenced to death, but in an admirable act of forgiveness on July 24, 1952, Truman commuted the sentence to life imprisonment.

Navigating DEI: The Roadmap for Revolutionizing the Workplace for Women

Diversity, equity, and inclusion programs, or DEI, are once again in the spotlight. With a politically charged election on the horizon, eye-catching policies are seizing the attention of some voters. Born out of the marches of the 1960s and 70s and the subsequent demand for integration, DEI initiatives were first recognized in the 80s. Pushed to the spotlight after George Floyd died in 2020, they are now at the forefront of most academia and business initiatives to date, or are they? Has the momentum slid backward and promises gone unkept?

“There have been reports of organizations who made significant promises after the brutal murder of George Floyd, regarding DEI, and unfortunately, not all have been kept. Now we are approaching a season where for some DEI is being politicized as the villain, and that’s just not the case,” says Dr. Tanjia M. Coleman, President of Reimagine Organization Development and Executive Women in Command.

75% of people believe that DEI commitments made by businesses during the height of the pandemic have been abandoned, according to the latest research by Omnibus conducted by NPower’s Command shift coalition. That same percentage thinks companies are failing to employ women of color.

“Historically women of color have sustained the lowest income levels as well as the highest rate of job losses in the United States as a whole,” adds Dr. Coleman. “While there is a myriad of reasons, societal, emotional, there is another reason for the divide, and that is a lack of guidance.”

Dr. Coleman has dedicated her life to understanding and educating others on the struggles that can present in a business environment for both the employer and employee. As an acclaimed author, Dr. Coleman outlines how to navigate the obstacles and systemic roadblocks that hinder women from succeeding in today’s workplace in her latest book, Three Second World: Essentials for Engineering Your Future, an Amazon #1 best seller. Her roadmap of leadership coaching tools includes:

- Training internal facilitators on assessments to help team members identify blind spots and amplify positive behavioral leadership traits.
- Engaging retired team members as leadership coaches and mentors.
- Internal sponsorship and mentorship programs.
- Internal leadership coaching that is developed and created in-house.
- Ensuring Human Resource teams are aware of your desire to be involved in any in-house leadership coaching and training programs by building relationships and staying in close communication.

“Every business has blind spots. But the path to success is taking the initial step to fix them. And even though to some they may seem like minor cracks in the walkway, for others the gaps are wide. Working together to identify those gaps will make for a more successful business,” says Dr. Coleman.

What is the Diabetes Plate Method?

vegetables means you will get plenty of servings of these superfoods.

Examples of nonstarchy vegetables:

- Asparagus
- Broccoli or Cauliflower
- Brussels Sprouts
- Cabbage (green, red, napa, bok choy, chinese)
- Carrots
- Celery
- Cucumber
- Eggplant
- Leafy greens such as kale, collards, mustard greens, or Swiss Chard
- Mushrooms
- Okra
- Green beans, pea pods, snow peas, and sugar snap peas
- Peppers such as bell peppers and hot peppers
- Salad greens such as lettuce, spinach, arugula, endive, and other salad mixes
- Squash such as zucchini, yellow squash, chayote, spaghetti squash
- Tomatoes

2. Fill one quarter of your plate with lean protein foods

Foods high in protein such as fish, chicken, lean beef, soy products, and cheese are all considered “protein foods.”

Proteins foods (especially those from animal sources) usually contain saturated fat, which may increase your risk of heart disease. Lean proteins are lower in fat and saturated fat, making them a healthier choice.

Keep in mind that some plant-based protein foods (like beans and legumes) are also high in carbohydrates.

Examples of lean protein foods include:

- Chicken, turkey, and eggs
- Fish like salmon, cod, tuna, tilapia, or swordfish

- Shellfish like shrimp, scallops, clams, mussels, or lobster
- Lean beef cuts such as chuck, round, sirloin, flank, or tenderloin
- Lean pork cuts such as center loin chop or tenderloin
- Lean deli meats
- Cheese and cottage cheese

Plant-based sources of protein:

- Beans, lentils, hummus, and falafel
- Nuts and nut butters
- Edamame
- Tofu and tempeh
- Plant-based meat substitutes

3. Fill one quarter of your plate with carbohydrate foods

Foods that are higher in carbohydrate include grains, starchy vegetables, beans and legumes, fruit, yogurt, and milk. These foods have the greatest effect on blood sugar.

Limiting your portion of carbohydrate foods to one quarter of your plate can help keep blood sugars from rising too high after meals.

Examples of carbohydrate foods:

- Whole grains such as brown rice, bulgur, oats/oatmeal, polenta, popcorn, quinoa, and whole grain products (bread, pasta, tortillas)
- Starchy vegetables such as acorn squash, butternut squash, green peas, parsnips, plantain, potato, pumpkin, and sweet potato/yam
- Beans and legumes such as black, kidney, pinto, and garbanzo beans
- Fruits and dried fruit
- Dairy products like milk, yogurt, and milk substitutes (i.e. soy milk)

4. Choose water or a low-calorie drink

Water is the best choice because it contains no calories or carbohydrates and has no effect on blood sugar. Other zero- or low-calorie drink options include:

- Unsweetened tea (hot or iced)
- Unsweetened coffee (hot or iced)
- Sparkling water/club soda
- Flavored water or sparkling water without added sugar
- Diet soda or other diet drinks

What about combination foods?

You can still use the plate method when preparing and portioning combination foods. Just identify the different foods in the dish and think about where they would fit in the plate. For example, in a slice of pizza, the crust would be the carbohydrate food, the cheese and any meats on top would be the protein foods, and the tomato sauce and any vegetables on top would be the nonstarchy vegetables.

Try to prepare combination dishes with the same proportions as the plate. So, to build a pizza using the plate method, choose thin crust to reduce the portion of carbohydrates and top it with lots of vegetables instead of meat (or choose a lean meat). Stick to just 1 or 2 slices and serve with a side salad so that half your meal is nonstarchy vegetables.

Lake County Prosecutor, Purdue Northwest dedicate new High Tech Crime Unit partnership

Dignitaries gather at Purdue University Northwest Sept. 25 for a ribbon-cutting and tour of the High Tech Crime Unit, a partnership between the Lake County Prosecutor's Office and PNW.

The Lake County Prosecutor's office, in partnership with Purdue University Northwest (PNW), celebrated the beginnings of their cooperation through a state-funded High Tech Crime Unit (HTCU) during a ribbon-cutting ceremony on Sept. 25.

Under the supervision of the prosecutor's office, the HTCU will provide significant assistance in the investigation and prosecution of criminal acts committed through various digital devices. The unit will assist law enforcement agencies and prosecutors' offices in Lake and Porter counties. The HTCU will be housed on PNW's Hammond campus and partner with its existing Center for Crime and Forensics.

"We are so grateful and excited about this opportunity to partner with Purdue Northwest," said Lake County Prosecutor Bernard Carter. "This partnership will have a tremendous impact on the criminal justice system as we work in tandem with Purdue Northwest students to extract crucial evidence for prosecution."

"It is central to the mission of Purdue University Northwest as a metropolitan university to grow its partnerships with community stakeholders," said PNW Chancellor Thomas L. Keon. "The High Tech Crime Unit at Purdue Northwest is a win-win for the prosecutor's office and the university. Lake and Porter counties have an important resource to support their law enforcement agencies. The operations will be enhanced by our experienced Forensics faculty members and highly motivated students involved in Forensic Science, Computer Science, Cybersecurity and more. PNW's high-quality programs in these disciplines made it the prime choice for the Lake County prosecutor's office to partner with to meet an important need for digital forensics knowledge and application."

Approximately 80 people gathered for the ribbon-cutting and tour of the HTCU, including local law enforcement leadership; state and federal elected officials; Lake County Prosecutor's Office staff; and PNW administrators, faculty, staff and students.

Modern tools to prosecute crime

The HTCU at PNW will develop specialized operations and process digital evidence from computers, cameras, laptops, tablets, cell phones and other electronic devices to reduce turnaround time for evidence collection. Work at the HTCU is expected to assist in investigations of financial and violent crimes.

Two full-time Lake County Prosecutor's office members will staff the HTCU and process digital evidence submitted by local law enforcement agencies in Lake and Porter counties. The HTCU is also located near PNW's Center for Crime and Forensics to offer seamless sharing of resources and subject-area expertise. The Center for Crime and Forensics provides education, training, research and development, and forensic science testing services to academia, law enforcement and legal communities alike. Its aim is to promote the advancement of science while improving the resources needed to ensure public safety at the local, state and federal levels.

PNW has two full-time forensics faculty members with over 30 years of combined experience in crime lab management, including building and operating multidiscipline forensic testing facilities. PNW students in pertinent disciplines are also expected to have opportunities to contribute at the HTCU as deputized workers that can help process evidence and testify in criminal prosecution.

The HTCU helps meet a modern turn in the prevalence of increased electronic device use by perpetrators, and the subsequent "digital fingerprints" and evidence trail that can be left behind. From instant messaging to global positioning system (GPS) data, law enforcement officials and digital forensics experts are leveraging new technology pieces to solve and build solid cases for the prosecution of criminal acts.

Statewide priority

In spring 2021, Indiana lawmakers agreed to award county prosecutors across the state with resources for fighting computer-related crimes. Legislation authorized the Indiana Prosecuting Attorneys Council to establish high tech crime units with the intention of aiding investigation and collection of digital evidence and prosecution of financial, sexual or other digital crimes committed with computer networks. The units were also intended to partner with higher education institutions to collaborate with resources and provide students real-world experience in digital forensics.

The Lake County Prosecutor's Office was selected as a recipient for funding. The office chose to partner with PNW to leverage existing resources in academics and research in forensics, criminal justice and computer-related disciplines.
